DRUNKEN NEGRO BLOWS UP CAMP.

At an early hour Tuesday morning an unknown negro who was under the influence of whisky, attempted to kill all the occupants of the railroad camp of Stern & Dillard, near Winchester, by the use of dynamite.

The negro, while drunk, went to the camp and started a row, but was put out by the occupants. Instead of leaving the premises he secured some dynamite and placed it under the camp, and after getting it all arranged called to the occupants to look out. They ran out of the camp, but got away in time to escape injury. The camp was completely destroyed by the explosion.

A reward has been offered by the contractors for the capture of the negro. While no one was injured, it is believed that it was the intention of the negro to kill all of the occupants in this way as revenge for being put out of the camp.
